

THE CHINOOK ADVANCE

Vol. 22

Chinook, Alberta. Thursday, July 8th 1943

Dr. K. W. Neashy
Director, Agricultural Department
North-West Line Elevators Association

A Warning

As a result of unfavourable weather conditions prevailing last fall, including frost in some areas, much of the wheat, oats, barley, and flax is germinating poorly. The situation appears to be most serious with oats. The areas chiefly affected are those along, and north of, the old C.N.R. main line, and the area adjacent to the foothills in Alberta.

It is safe to say that all cereal seeds in the areas named above should be tested for germination. Our own laboratory has already received nearly 10,000 samples, and doubtless, the Dominion Government laboratories have tested large numbers.

However, the total laboratory facilities in the West are inadequate to handle all seeds which should be tested. Farmers who have not already had tests made would be wise to make their own.

We are having cards printed giving detailed instructions for making home germination tests. One of these will be hung in all country elevators of Line Companies associated with the work of this Department. The same information will be printed on the "Seedtime and Harvest" leaflet distributed to grain buyers for passing on to their customers.

Roughly speaking, seed germinating 85% or over is O.K.; from 65% to 85%, rate of seeding should be increased; less than 65%, seed should be replaced.

Farmers unable to reach a line elevator conveniently may obtain copies of the leaflet by writing directly to the Agricultural Department, The North-West Line Elevators Association, Winnipeg (or Calgary).

New C.P.R. Engines Keep Canada's War Goods Rolling

The first of 20 powerful new Mikado 2-8-2 class being added by the Canadian Pacific Railway this year, Engine No. 5417 was delivered on March 31 and put into immediate service in the all-important job of keeping Canada's war materials rolling on schedule. Completion of the contract held by Canadian Locomotive Company in Kingston, Ont., will bring to 84 the number of new locomotives added by the Canadian Pacific since the outbreak of the war, with all of them specially needed to meet business demands which in 1942 showed a 49.8 percent increase over 1939.

Their construction marking the use for the first time of considerable Canadian-made boiler shell plate, so far as is known, the new Mikado-type locomotives also have in their makeup Canadian-made tender tank plate in quantity for the first time. Before the war these materials came from the United States and from England but the substitutes were necessary to avoid delay in delivery of the locomotives which were ordered in January of 1942.

The first new Mikado-type locomotive is shown here, with a close-up of two of its 63-inch driving wheels. It will haul up to 5,500 tons or the equivalent of a 100-car train, depending on the grades, and is so counter-balanced it can be used for heavy passenger work when required, such as the hauling of the long troop trains which must go through on time.

Posts—and a Reminder

Practically every plant, wild or cultivated, is subject to fungus and insect attack. 100% health is as rare in plants as it is in men.

When introducing new crops, we usually have a good idea of the diseases and insects which may cause trouble, but we cannot forecast the severity of attacks. Furthermore, control measures practised elsewhere may not be practicable or effective in our own region.

This year, we are concentrating a good deal of attention on oil crops: notably flax, sunflowers, Argentine rape and soybeans. The Dominion Entomological Laboratory, at Brandon is anxious to secure all possible information on insects found on the above crops. Growers of these crops are urged to be on the lookout, especially for flea beetles (on rape) and the sunflower moth. Please send specimens and report infestations to Dr. Bird at the Brandon Laboratory. Send disease specimens to the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology at Edmonton, Saskatoon or Winnipeg.

Cut Savily Traps

Dr. C. W. Farstad has prepared the following paragraph and asked us to give it all possible publicity: "During a number of farmers around the west have made a great forward a good plan for pest control: when stem sawfly by planting traps. After having established a trap, and the sawflies have laid their eggs, the next step is to complete the destruction of the grubs in the stem. This can be accomplished by cutting the trap with a mower about July 10th, or simply by cutting it with the binder and cultivating the stubble immediately afterward."

GROWN IN SUNNY, SOUTHERN ONTARIO

Our Russian Ally

SINCE HITLER INVADED RUSSIA on June 22, 1941, the war on that front has at all times occupied a place of prominence in the daily news. In June of this year, the second anniversary of the beginning of this momentous struggle was observed, and the celebration was marked by a spirit of optimism and confidence on the part of Russia and her Allies. When Hitler sent his armies into Russia, it appeared for a time that he might be able to repeat the rapid conquest he had made in many of the countries of Europe, and his boast that Russia would be defeated in six weeks, was not taken lightly. To the surprise of Hitler and the whole world, the German armies were turned back, and after two years of fighting Hitler's position in Russia was very far removed from the victory which he so confidently expected.

Germans Are Driven Back

Some of the most dramatic and heroic incidents of the war have taken place on the Russian front, and all free people have been impressed with the magnificent way in which the people of the Soviet Union campaign, the Germans occupied the fertile Ukraine, and drove to within sixty miles of Moscow. The arrival of winter, and the determined opposition of the Russian armies, saved that city. Later, at Stalingrad, one of the most crushing defeats of this war was dealt the German forces, and they have also been driven from the Caucasus, whose rich oil fields played such an important part in Nazi strategy. As the second anniversary of Hitler's attack on Russia was observed, Germany's position there was precarious, while in spite of the great losses which have been inflicted upon her, Russia's strength was increasing steadily.

Friendship Is On Firm Basis

Out of the desperate struggle through which Russia has passed, has come a new understanding and a firmer friendship between that country and the Allied nations. Before the war Russia had at times been depicted as an enigma in the world's political picture. The war, however, has brought her into close contact with Great Britain, the United States and others of the United Nations, and has given rise to a basis for understanding and community of action now, and in the post-war period. When Russia was attacked, Premier Churchill, in the British House of Commons, said: "The Russian danger is our danger and the danger of the United States, just as the cause of any Russian fighting for his hearth and home is the cause of free men in every part of the globe." The extent of Allied help to Russia has been well known, and has been gratefully acknowledged by the people of the Soviet Union. When the war is won, we may be proud to have fought as Allies of such steadfast and gallant people.

Agents in Spanish Town Watch Gibraltar For Ship Movements
On a lazy summer afternoon, the agents of warring nations can be seen sipping drinks at the Bar National, the Bar Belmonte, or on the terraces and balconies of the Hotels Iberia and Sevilla in 73-year-old La Linea—Spain's youngest but most unusual wartime town.

They always seem to have one eye on the Bay of Gibraltar. When they see anything of interest in the bay, some walk briskly to the telephone booths, some head for the telegraph offices, some jot down notes, and some call for another drink.

La Linea is little more than 1,000 yards from the British fortress of Gibraltar. It once was just an adjunct to nearby San Roque. The wartime boom has increased its population to 52,000, including some 4,000 Portuguese and the "rock lizards" or natives of Gibraltar.

The town enjoys a climate similar to that of southern California and its beauty is enhanced by the blue Mediterranean.

Because of its location a keen observer in La Linea easily can detect movements of all merchant vessels and warships and planes arriving at and departing from Gibraltar. The Axis nations have been quick to utilize this advantage by sending agents who report the movements to Berlin.

Each of the major warring powers—Great Britain, the United States, Germany and Italy—have as many as 20 agents at La Linea most of the time. Besides keeping watch on Gibraltar, they can talk to workers returning from the fortress. And they can watch each other.

Thousands of La Linea's workers commute daily to Gibraltar, Algiers or Tarifa.

The town has a city hall, military barracks, frontier guards' house, customs house, courthouse, post office, many two- and three-story buildings and a few new four-story structures. It is an attractive town.

Its women are pretty, with large dark eyes, dark Spanish complexions and graceful movements.

The town is too young to claim many famous sons. However, Pepe Cruz Herrera, the painter, is fast becoming one of Spain's most celebrated artists.

Britain Takes Action

Black Market Offenders In Britain Get Heavy Sentences

There is in Britain no black market such as exists in many European countries, where there are recognized black market prices for many goods, and illegal dealings interfere seriously with supplies to the legitimate market.

But there are some "black market transactions" in Britain—sales at illegal prices of goods not acquired through normal distribution channels. Although small in volume, these dealings are treated very seriously by the government, because of the possible effects upon civilian morale. This is particularly so where food is concerned.

The main steps taken against the black market in food have been as follows: First, the Ministry of Food's enforcement organization has been strengthened by the appointment of many additional inspectors. Second, the penalties which the court can inflict have been increased. In 1942 an order was issued increasing the maximum term of imprisonment from three years to 14 years.

In addition, unless there are special circumstances, the court must impose a fine equal to the profit which the offender has derived from his offense. The fine is not limited to the amount of the profit; a further $20,000 (£5,000) or three times the illegal price demanded for the goods, whichever is the greater, may be added.

Third, all traders in foods must be licensed by the Ministry of Food, and in serious cases the license is withdrawn. This provides a powerful deterrent to any trader tempted to indulge in illegal dealings. Retailers had been subject to licensing since the beginning of the war, but since August, 1941, wholesalers also have had to be licensed. The general policy is to grant licenses only to those who were established in the food trades before the war.—Financial Post.

Their gifts included 5,000 cigars, a box of onions, a typewritten portrait of Mr. Roosevelt, the Book of Mormon, corn-cob pipes, a copy of George Washington's will, catnip for the Churchill cat, and a Canadian dime with an extract from the "blood, sweat and tears" speech engraved in tiny letters on its obverse.

HOME SERVICE

VITAMINS ARE IMPORTANT PART OF DIET TODAY

Right Foods Important

Today everyone has become vitamin-conscious. They realize that fitness depends upon correct foods for the body and the more fit we are the more successful we are. Especially is this true in wartime, for it's the fit nations that will win the war. In times of distress they will be able to stand more. As a member of the United Nations it is essential that you should eat right.

Don't think you can get your vitamins entirely from capsules and then go ahead and eat unbalanced meals. This is wrong. The proper foods with high vitamin content are important. So when doing your market shopping, be sure to buy the correct vegetables and fruits.

Our 32-page booklet tells you how to get the maximum vitamin values from the food you eat every day. It will answer all your questions about vitamins and will describe which vitamins are in certain foods. You may wonder what vitamins are, what they can do, and especially what is the meaning of all this enthusiasm for them. After reading our booklet, you'll no longer wonder.

Foods that are rich in vitamins are not necessarily more expensive than those low in vitamins.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Vitamins to Keep You Fit" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave. E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

A USEFUL WEED
At last science has found something good to say about the field bindweed. One of the most difficult weeds to eradicate from grain fields, it has been found that cuts on the hands of workers handling bindweed roots stopped bleeding immediately.

Now medical science knows that this weed has powerful blood clotting properties and it may become a medicinal plant.

The Fly Pest

Is A Serious Menace To The Family's Health In The Summer

If every housewife in the land could see a common house-fly magnified to one hundred times its natural size, she would feel such horror and disgust she would never rest while there was one of them around the place. For the fine invisible hairs revealed by the microscope, hairs that clothe its feet, legs and underparts, are found to be alive with germs and contaminated with unspeakable impurities. Their feet are equipped with sticky pads to enable them to cling to such places as walls and ceilings. Imagine the trail of dirt and disease a sufficiently powerful microscope would show! Diseases thus carried and spread by the common house-fly include typhoid fever, dysentery, summer complaint, tuberculosis and cholera. The house-fly is also suspected of transmitting infantile paralysis (poliomyelitis).

Grave Danger To Babies

"There is probably no greater source of danger to a baby than the disease germs collected by the wanderings of the house-fly and transferred to the foods and persons of its innocent victims," says a well-known medical officer of health. "Flies will carry on their feet, legs and body, and in the alimentary canal, the specific germs causing typhoid fever, cholera, infantile diarrhoea, tuberculosis and other diseases. These organisms may be deposited in the food, because flies are fond of all human foods, both liquid and solid, and because they are active insects, travelling extensively and flitting about from place to place with rapidity. They wipe their feet, perhaps bearing myriads of disease germs, on everything they touch. When we ponder over the source from which flies come and their filthy habits, we should not allow them to live in a kitchen or a dining room, and longer than it is absolutely necessary to kill them."

A house fly moves its wings backward and forward 330 times per second.

Pattern For Disaster

BY J. B. RYAN

CHAPTER X.

"NO, ESTEBAN," cried Rosita. "If they have caught Pancho, they will be watching for us. Do not go. We must have food." Esteban. "We have had nothing to eat or drink for over 24 hours." He patted his sister's hand. "Do not worry, Rosita. I promise you that I shall return. The darkness will cover my movements; the day is done and the neighborhood will not be as congested as it was when Pancho sallied out."

"Let me go, Esteban," said Morgan. "Your place is here with your sister. If there is danger without, I should be the one to face it."

"Let us not be unreasonable about this," smiled Esteban. "Let us be practical instead of heroic. There are two things to be done—obtain food and protect Rosita. My qualifications for the one job outweigh yours, so you must assume the other duty which, I trust, you will perform as well as I would."

Rosita's eyes widened and she glanced quickly at Morgan. He pretended not to be conscious of her gaze as he answered Esteban. "You are right, I suppose," he admitted. "But—since we shall be safe here, you must take this. And he held out the automatic pistol taken from Verde."

Once more Esteban moved his head in negation. "Keep the gun, senior. If the police do trap me, it is better that I have no weapon with which to shoot one of them and make the case against me even worse."

They saw him to the door and watched him slip into the darkening street. Esteban will be all right, said Morgan, as he led the silent girl back to the hiding-place among the great bales. "And when he returns and we have eaten the food we need, we shall feel more like tackling the problem of doing something for Pancho."

"What can we do?" she asked dispiritedly. "We cannot, of course, break into the jail to free him; we surrender, we would not be helping him; if we leave Buenos Aires, we will be abandoning him to his fate."

Morgan fingered his chin quietly. "I have gotten you into quite a mess, haven't I, seniorita? If I had never come to Argentina, this would not have happened."

"Please do not misunderstand me, senior. Rosita placed her hand on the man's arm to emphasize her earnestness. "It is not that I blame you—"

She checked herself, the fingers tightening about Morgan's arm and her head turned quickly. Out of the door behind her had sounded a squeak of rusty hinges and then the closing of the door.

"Quiet, Rosita!" Morgan whispered, drawing her back into their rude shelter. "That is not Esteban!"

Silenced by his warning, the girl cowered beside him. In the quiet thus achieved, Rosita was able to hear the murmur of voices that Morgan had detected over the rasp of metal and the slam of wood.

One of the voices rose. "Sangre de Dios, the place is full! Let me search among all those bales!" Already I have strained my back shifting weights about."

Another speaker answered the complaint with a short laugh. "We have our orders from Captain Rojas along the waterfront. Remember, there are strands of loose wool clinging to the clothes of that scuffed Pancho as though he had been hiding in just such a place as this."

The wool-strewn floor decked the footsteps of the police as the men spread away from the door. Morgan caught the hand of Rosita, stole around the dislodged bale and tipped toward an aisle of piled wool toward the darker recesses of the warehouse's rear.

The muffled thud of an overturned bale echoed hollowly through the storeroom. Morgan and the girl came to the end of the passage. A shadowy figure loomed against the square of window on the wall ahead and the American flattened himself against the bales. The policeman turned toward the aisle; the bulked wool yielded slightly behind one of Morgan's shoulders, and Morgan was quick to squirm himself into the opening caused by two bales being stacked a few inches apart.

He pulled Rosita in after him. The place was a tight fit. The bales pressed tightly against their backs and chests, but the aperture was an ideal sanctuary. The wool, fluffing out after Rosita had squeezed through, practically closed the opening, like foliage over a cave mouth.

THE man in the aisle came nearer. Morgan could hear the soft pat of his hand against the walls of bales on either side of him. Rosita, as if fearful that the pawing hand would grope between the bales and touch her, shrank closer against Morgan.

Suddenly, from across the warehouse, came a shout, "Amigos, we have one of them!"

The warehouse door banged shut; the man in the corridor beside Morgan and Rosita halted, then raced toward the scene of disturbance. A scuffle was in progress at the door, and from all parts of the building men scrambled to assist the two guards.

"The babel of voices died down to allow one speaker to be heard. 'Well, you rascal, where are your companions?'"

"I do not know what you are talking about," replied Esteban sulkily. "I am alone. Why have you jumped on me like this?"

The man who was questioning Esteban laughed jeeringly. "You are alone?" he scoffed. "Then what are you doing with all that bread and wine? You have enough there to feed a dozen people."

Rosita stirred. Senior Morgan—you have a gun. Can't we can't we help Esteban?"

"They are too many for us," he counseled reluctantly. "And this pistol is useless. Esteban himself would not want us to fire on the police."

"The other two must be in this warehouse." The leader of the police squad was giving orders. "Take this man outside to Captain Rojas. I want this place searched thoroughly by the rest of you."

"But we have already poked into every nook and cranny."

"Nevertheless we shall go through it once more, overlooking not an inch of space. Start from the side and work toward the rear, moving every bale out of the way as you go along. We'll find them if it takes all night."

MORGAN touched Rosita's shoulder. "The window," he whispered. "While they are busy in front we can crawl through the window and slip away."

"But—Esteban—"

"They have taken him away already. It is up to us to free him and to Pancho. We are their only hope."

Reluctantly he yielded to the pressure of his hand and slid out from between the bales. But when Morgan stepped out into aisle, it was the girl's hand that gestured warningly. Already one of the policemen had circled the bales and was on watch at the window.

The path between the bales was dark, but only dark enough for Morgan and Rosita to be unseen as long as they remained perfectly still. Morgan's lips brushed against the girl's ear. "Remain here," he murmured. "Perhaps I can get that fellow out of the way."

He stepped away before she could protest, walking toward the window without any effort to render himself inconspicuous. The guard saw him coming, but Morgan's attitude was so like that of one of his companions that the American was allowed to reach the window without being questioned.

"Have you seen any sign of them?" Morgan asked.

"No," the guard began, then, his attention caught by the strange voice or by some oddity of Morgan's dress or appearance, his head bent for a better look at Morgan's face.

Morgan hit him then, catching the man on the side of the skull with the flat of the automatic cupped in his hand. He caught the slumping figure

Flying Again

Wing Commander, Charles Gray, expects shortly to revert to the rank of pilot officer, when he becomes a full-fledged air-gunner—a job he has yearned after, for two years. During that time he has been director of accounts at R.C.A.F. headquarters, Ottawa. He comes from Vancouver, B.C., and is well known there as an aviator. With Clive McConnan he held the North Pacific 140 pound doubles championship from 1928 to 33 and has held several slalom and downhill ski titles.

and when he had stretched the senseless man on the floor Rosita had stolen out of the shadows to join him beside the window.

Morgan lifted the girl, assisted her through the window, then crawled out himself to join her below. She followed him as he crept along the side of the building they had just quitted. At the corner of the warehouse, Morgan crouched in the edge of shadow. The automobiles were just ahead, and a large number of men were gathered near them. The girl and the man were close enough to recognize two of the figures in the crowd—Captain Rojas and Esteban Velasquez.

ROJAS was listening to an account of the capture of Esteban, obviously pleased with what he heard. "Morgan, the American, and this fellow's sister must be in that building. Take Velasquez to the jail while I detect the search for the others."

Esteban was hustled to one of the guards and the machine filled with guards after the prisoner had entered. Then Rojas hurried toward the warehouse entrance, passing less than a yard from the very people he was seeking.

"Now is our chance, senior," urged Rosita. "We can be gone before Rojas comes back."

But Morgan made no effort to seize

Transport Planes

Are Carrying All Sorts of Things Between Countries

In describing what transport airplanes were doing these days, the O.W.I. mentioned the following facts: Beetles from the Fiji Islands were flown to Honduras to eat weevils which were damaging hemp root. A complete hospital was flown to Alaska in 36 hours after the Japanese bombing of Dutch Harbor.

Planes returning to the United States from afar have not flown empty, but have brought rubber from Brazil, platinum from the Persian Gulf, mica from India and diamonds from South Africa.

An Army pilot complained that he had left his laundry in a India and wouldn't be able to get it for a week.

THEIR BATTLE CHANT

Cpl. Robert Dunn, Westville, N.J., writes from Africa that negro artillerymen provided a battle cry for Americans on one sector in the Tunisian campaign. With each fire order, the boys kissed the projectile as it went on its way and chanted in rhythm, "Rommel, count yo' men." With each subsequent fire order they sang out, "Rommel, count yo' men again."

Before the First World War, there were more Germans earning a living in London alone than in all the colonies owned by Germany at that time.

Serious Drought Threatens South

LETHBRIDGE, July 5th.—Farmers and Ranchers in Southern Alberta anxiously scanned a cloudless sky today after a rainless week end. Hope was high Saturday that Sunday would bring greatly needed rain but instead a dry wind seared crops and today there is no hint of rain.

Over a wide area north and east and to some degree south-east drought conditions are serious and it is feared 600 townships, upwards of 13 millions acres, will suffer a full or partial failure unless moisture falls immediately.

MAY MOVE CATTLE

Crops are steadily deteriorating grass on the ranges is burning and the moving out of the affected areas of many cattle and sheep is expected.

Some farmers have turned their stock in grain fields, so badly has the grain been burned. Fall rye and winter wheat in the drought zone will be a failure. Good summer fallow is holding up well but this, too, needs rain at once. May and June rain was about half of the amount recorded last season.

The area along the border from Manyberries west to the Rockies is still in good shape with grass satisfactory, according to George Ross, of Aden, who came in from the ranch Sunday.

GRASS GOOD

In the Southwest area moisture is still ample although even there a good general rain would be welcome. Fine crops are to be found along the foothills and the grass is good.

In the irrigated areas farmers are pouring water on crops and these are making excellent growth in the warm sunshine. Beets are receiving their second hoeing and show a good crop.

THE WATCHERS on the cliffs cheer their going and coming as—night after night—R.C.A.F. bombers deliver shattering blows.

Canadian attack teams are famous for their skill and daring. As raw recruits, they entered R.C.A.F. Training Schools. They emerged within a few happy and exciting months as trained specialists—clear-eyed and competent.

Every member of a bomber crew is an expert at his own job, yet at the same time part of a closely-knit, smooth-working team. Happily, too, the air training and technical knowledge possessed by these fighting comrades of the skies will open up golden opportunities to them later in civil life.

Cost of Making Wheat Alcohol Cut In Half

New processes are constantly being developed which will reduce the cost of converting farm crops into industrial materials. An Associated Press Dispatch reports development of a new distilling process which went into operation late in June and which it is claimed will cut in two the costs of converting wheat into alcohol to be used for war purposes. It is claimed this development will make wheat alcohol as cheap to produce as molasses alcohol. This process will save the United States $30,000,000 annually in war alcohol costs and at the same time will provide one billion pounds of protein feeds for livestock and for curing human foodstuffs. In advocating establishment of a Western Division of the National Research Council, with fully equipped laboratories, the Line Elevator Companies contend that the resultant research will bring about erection of grain alcohol distilleries in Western Canada, new industrial uses and enlarged markets for farm crops, and greater prosperity for the Western farmer.
